The History

The area of Battle Ground was originally inhabited by the Chinook and Western Klickitat Native Americans. The city received its name Battle Ground following the threat of a battle between the Native American Klickitat Tribe and Captain Strong's Volunteers from Fort Vancouver. Prior to the battle, the Native Americans fled internment at Fort Vancouver. Captain Strong pursued the Klickitat Tribe, but before the battle ensued, Chief Umtuch was mysteriously killed. The area became referred to as Strong's Battle Ground. Historians site Battle Ground Lake as the actual location for the battle that never happened. Soon after, the area began to appear on maps as Battle Ground.
